2025 PE investments in Indian real estate at USD 6.7 billion, a 59% YoY increase: Savills India

Hyderabad Private equity capital deployed into Indian real estate reached USD 6.7 billion (INR 593 billion) in 2025, when reckoning only equity deals executed through private route, structured debt deals by Alternative Investment Funds (AIFs) and NCD issuances. This denotes a 59% YOY rise over 2024 investments inflows. Investment activity during the year was largely led by overseas institutional capital, with foreign investors contributing 76% of total inflows, highlighting their continued dominance in the market, according to the latest data by Savills India, a global property consulting firm.

Data shows that office segment attracted USD 2.4 billion (INR 210 billion), highest inflows accounting for 35.3% of total investment inflows, supported by stable leasing activity and long-term demand visibility. Data centres and the residential sector followed, accounting for 23.2% and 21% of total investments, respectively. While investments in data centres were entirely driven by foreign capital, the residential segment witnessed equal participation from domestic and foreign investors. Land continued to remain a key asset class, accounting for nearly one-fourth of total equity inflows. Over 60% of land-related investments were aligned towards office and data centres developments.

Savills India expects USD 6.5 billion – USD 7.5 billion of private equity investments in real estate in 2026. The office segment is expected to continue attracting institutional capital in core markets. Industrial and logistics assets are anticipated to remain a key focus area, driven by supply chain diversification, manufacturing-led demand, and increasing preference for organised warehousing. Data centres are expected to witness sustained investor interest, supported by rising digital adoption, cloud expansion, and long-term capacity requirements. Residential real estate is also expected to see steady private equity participation, led by luxury and premium housing. Alternative asset classes such as student housing, co-living, senior living, and life sciences are expected to gradually gain traction, though from a relatively small base.

"Private equity investments in Indian real estate have regained momentum, supported by stable economic growth and improving asset-level fundamentals. Capital deployment has increasingly focused across office, industrial and logistics, and data centres, reflecting a preference for income-generating assets. The residential segment has also gained traction, driven by sustained end-user demand, particularly in the premium and luxury segments. Looking ahead, private equity activity is expected to remain steady, with foreign institutional capital continuing to anchor investments. The growing adoption of REITs in India is reshaping the real estate investment landscape by improving exit visibility and reinforcing institutional participation across asset classes." said Sumeet Bhatia, Managing Director, Capital Market Services, Savills India.
