“Hanumakonda, July 22 (Indian Chronicle): Telangana Minister for Transport and BC Welfare Ponnam Prabhakar criticized the Central Government, stating that it is constitutionally responsible for providing quality education, a transparent examination system, and equal opportunities to the youth who shape the nation's future. However, he alleged that the government has neglected this responsibility and is playing with the future of students. “The Minister was the chief guest at the 'Chatron Ki Goonj' program held at Kishanpura in the Warangal West Assembly constituency. The event was attended by MLAs Nayani Rajender Reddy and K.R. Nagaraju, MLC Shankar Naik, DCC President Inagala Venkat Ramireddy, Congress leaders, students, youth representatives, and party workers. “Speaking on the occasion, the Minister said that over the past few years, repeated incidents of question paper leaks, examination cancellations, and re-examinations across the country have caused severe anxiety among lakhs of students. He said it was unfortunate that the hard work of students, who spend months preparing for examinations, goes in vain because of paper leaks. “Referring to the NEET-UG 2026 examination cancellation, he said it had created widespread uncertainty among students. He added that irregularities in the conduct of the examination and the allegations that later surfaced had raised serious questions about the credibility of the examination system. He expressed concern that many students had suffered severe mental stress, while some tragic cases of suicide had shaken the nation. “Holding the Union Government morally responsible, he demanded the immediate resignation of Union Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan. He alleged that the Central Government had failed to take strict action against those responsible for the paper leaks and instead resorted to lathi-charge against students who were peacefully protesting, calling it an attack on democratic values. “He further criticized the Centre for suppressing peaceful protests organized by Congress leaders against the police action on students, describing it as a reflection of the government's arrogance. He said the government's unwillingness to hold a comprehensive discussion in Parliament on the NEET paper leak issue had only deepened public suspicion. He urged Prime Minister Narendra Modi to respond to the concerns of the country's youth. “Recalling that his own political journey began as a student leader, Ponnam Prabhakar said that student movements have historically brought about significant social and political changes. He called upon students across the country to actively participate in the 'Chatron Ki Goonj' campaign launched at the call of Rahul Gandhi. “The Minister asserted that the Congress Party would continue its fight alongside the youth until strict action is taken against those responsible for repeated examination paper leaks. He demanded that the Central Government establish a transparent, impartial, and secure examination system that ensures merit is respected and students receive fair opportunities. Concluding his address, he said the nation needs a government that protects the dreams of its youth, and reaffirmed that the Congress Party would always stand by young people in safeguarding their rights.

Safeguard Handloom Workers' Livelihoods: Representation to Deputy CM Bhatti Vikramarka

“Warangal, July 22 (Indian Chronicle): Chippa Venkateshwarlu, State Working President of the Telangana PCC Handloom Cell, met Deputy Chief Minister Bhatti Vikramarka during his visit to Warangal, under the guidance of Minister Konda Surekha. He presented a traditional Warangal carpet to the Deputy CM along with a representation urging the government to take measures to protect the livelihoods of handloom workers. “The representation requested the government to exclude carpets and bedsheets from the unified tender system currently used for procuring bedding materials for various welfare departments and to restore the previous practice of placing orders through TESCO. The leaders stated that such a decision would ensure continuous employment for thousands of impoverished handloom workers. “The delegation thanked the state government for increasing the wage component by 30 percent for handloom products procured through TESCO. They explained that approximately 10,000 handloom families—comprising around 50,000 weavers—in the erstwhile Warangal and Karimnagar districts depend on the production of carpets and bedsheets for their livelihood. For over four decades, TESCO has been procuring these products through handloom cooperative societies and supplying them to various government welfare departments. “However, the weavers alleged that the government's recent decision to procure 22 types of welfare supplies through a consolidated tender process has severely impacted them. This is because traditional handloom products—such as carpets and bedsheets—were included in that tender. They warned that this move risks causing job losses and threatens the very survival of the handloom industry in the region. “The memorandum recalled that representations had previously been submitted to the Chief Minister's Office (CMO), Ministers Konda Surekha, Ponnam Prabhakar, and Tummala Nageswara Rao, Warangal District Collector Adluri Laxman, the Commissioner of Handlooms & Textiles, the Principal Secretary of Tribal Welfare, and other officials. As no decision was taken, the weavers halted production starting June 1, 2026, and staged protests from June 6 to June 13, 2026. “The leaders stated that they called off the protest after receiving assurances from Minister Konda Surekha and officials from the Handlooms & Textiles Department and TESCO. They expressed their gratitude to the government for procuring the existing stocks of carpets and bedsheets from the cooperative societies through TESCO. A delegation appealed to the Deputy Chief Minister to issue orders ensuring that all future purchases of carpets and bedsheets for government welfare departments are made exclusively through TESCO, thereby guaranteeing continuous employment for handloom weavers. They also requested the government to waive the cash loans of handloom cooperative societies.

Many aspirants who had worked hard with dedication saw their dreams shattered due to the alleged irregularities. He noted that the examination had to be cancelled and re-conducted because of the paper leak, causing immense mental stress, uncertainty, and emotional trauma among students. “Shiva Kishore Goud emphasized that such incidents not only undermine the credibility of the education system but also push students into depression and despair. He urged the Central Government to enact stringent legislation to ensure that anyone found guilty of leaking question papers in government examinations receives strict punishment, including up to 10 years of imprisonment, to prevent such incidents in the future.

Mygate Brings AI-Powered Financial Operations to Housing Societies with MIRA

“Hyderabad: Mygate, India's leading community management platform, today announced the launch of MIRA (Mygate Intelligent Response Assistant), a suite of AI-powered capabilities designed to simplify and automate critical financial and administrative workflows for Resident Welfare Associations (RWAs) and housing societies. “The largest 25% of communities on Mygate manage an average of 700 homes, collect over ₹3.5 crore in annual maintenance each, and disburse more than ₹3.2 crore as an average annually across 40+ vendors in their respective communities. Yet much of the work involved in managing these finances—from vendor invoice verification to payment reconciliation—continues to rely on manual processes, consuming significant time and increasing the risk of errors. In pilot communities using MIRA, treasurers and accountants reported a reduction of up to 70% in time spent on these routine financial and administrative tasks.” “MIRA brings AI directly into these workflows, helping committees and treasurers complete critical operational tasks faster and with greater accuracy. The new capabilities can automatically extract information from vendor invoices, reconcile payments, analyze vendor transactions, track collections, identify overdue accounts and surface actionable financial insights in seconds. “Built into the Mygate platform, MIRA enables committee members to move from manually searching records and compiling reports to simply asking questions and receiving instant answers backed by community data.” “For treasurers, MIRA provides a comprehensive view of vendor payments by identifying transaction histories, highlighting spending patterns, flagging discrepancies and generating analysis—even from limited information such as cheque details. A task such as reconciling collections against bank records, which could previously take 30 minutes of manual effort per day, can now be completed in less than 5 minutes.” Shreyans Daga, Co-founder & CPO, Mygate, says, “Running a housing society is far more operationally intensive than most people realize. Committee members and treasurers are responsible for managing finances, vendors, collections, compliance and resident queries—often alongside their full-time jobs. Much of this work remains manual and time-consuming. With MIRA, tasks that once took hours can now be completed in seconds, enabling faster decisions, stronger financial governance and significantly less administrative burden for committees.”

FDA's Ruling on Nicotine Raises Case for India to Commission Its Own Scientific Appraisal; Experts Back ICMR-Led Review

“Hyderabad: The U.S. Food and Drug Administration's recent authorisation of modified-risk claims for certain non-combustible nicotine products is part of a broader international dialogue on strategies for tobacco and nicotine consumption. For India, the pivotal question is whether the country's research institutions are willing to conduct an independent analysis of this emerging data, adapted to its own setting. “Findings are accumulating from nations that have adopted different oversight models. Sweden, the United Kingdom, Japan and Norway have documented drops in cigarette smoking alongside the uptake of non-combustible alternatives. The United States permits modified-risk claims following FDA evaluation. None of these frameworks should be transplanted wholesale. Collectively, however, they constitute a body of research that warrants dispassionate review by domestic scientists — neither dismissed on ideological grounds nor embraced uncritically.” “The Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR) is the country's apex biomedical research body and the government's key scientific advisor on health. For over a century, its assessments have guided national policy on everything from infectious disease control to clinical research standards. With its institutional credibility, ICMR is best placed to lead an objective appraisal of emerging tobacco and nicotine data.” Dr. Mohsin Wali, Senior Consultant at Sir Ganga Ram Hospital, New Delhi says and a Padma Shri Awardee, “India has a track record of scrutinising global evidence critically and tailoring it to domestic priorities. ICMR exemplifies this pragmatic approach: in COVID-19 diagnostic validation, gene therapy development and clinical trials, and Good Clinical Practice, it has aligned its structures with internationally accepted benchmarks, including those of the U.S. FDA and ICH. This method enabled India to adopt proven technical practices while calibrating them to the national context. A similar assessment of the U.S. trajectory in tobacco governance is now worth pursuing. Over several decades, cigarette smoking and overall tobacco consumption have declined substantially in the United States, while India continues to face a large and, in some segments, growing challenge. Studying that divergence could inform strategies suited to India's distinct landscape.” “Science has long underpinned sound public health policy in the country. It guided the COVID-19 response, strengthened clinical research standards, and shaped vaccine development. Strategies for tobacco and nicotine consumption deserve the same rigour. The question is not whether the country should mirror the FDA. It is whether the country will apply the same independent scrutiny to emerging findings that has shaped much of its healthcare policy.” “Given the scale of India's tobacco epidemic, the answer should be driven by evidence both global and local for the benefit of Indian public health not by ideology, as the cost of lives lost each year is never recoverable.”
