Where Is the Medical Care After Spending Crores?

““Bhadrachalam, October 15, Indian Chronicle““A government hospital is a source of hope and reassurance for the poor. For tribal communities living in forests, people in remote villages, and ordinary citizens who cannot afford expensive treatment, government healthcare is often their lifeline. When crores of rupees are spent on constructing hospital buildings and salaries are paid to doctors, nurses, and laboratory technicians from the public exchequer, who is responsible if medical services still fail to meet expectations?“Certain conditions observed at the Bhadrachalam Government Hospital raise several questions that deserve attention. These questions are not intended to make personal allegations against anyone. They are being raised to ensure that public money is used properly and that people receive the healthcare they deserve.““? Problems Visible in the Dental Department.““An examination of the dental department at the government hospital raises concerns about the condition of the equipment, even when a doctor is available. If the dental chair used to seat or recline patients is not functioning properly and some instruments appear to be rusted, how can effective medical services be provided under such circumstances? There is a difference between examining a patient, prescribing medicines, and sending them away, and providing the necessary treatment within the same government hospital. If patients are forced to visit private hospitals to receive treatment, what happens to those who are financially disadvantaged?““? What Is the Situation in the AYUSH Departments?““After Dr Venkateswara Rao, who previously served in the homeopathy department, retired, how have medical services in that department been continued? Is a qualified doctor available, or is the department operating with only other staff members? Officials must answer questions about whether personnel with adequate knowledge of medicines and the ability to provide appropriate guidance to patients are available. Are the medicines required by patients available in the Ayurveda department? Are medical services being provided regularly in the Unani department? If patients are told that medicines are out of stock, who is responsible for purchasing and supplying them? Why do shortages occur? The public deserves to know the answers to all these questions. Regardless of the system of medicine, every department must have qualified practitioners, the necessary medicines, and adequate facilities. The mere presence of a department's name on a signboard does not prove that people are actually receiving medical care.““? Where Is the Money Worth Crores Being Spent?““What is the annual budget allocated to the government hospital? How much funding is released for each department? How much is spent on purchasing medical equipment? How much is allocated for the supply of medicines? How many doctors and staff members are working in each department? What are their qualifications? How much are they paid in salaries? And what level of services are patients actually receiving? These are not questions that should be avoided. They concern public money. People have the right to obtain information about the functioning of a hospital operated with government funds.““? Are Officials Who Take Action Against RMPs Also Inspecting the Government Hospital?““Preventing people without the required qualifications or legal authorization from practising medicine is an essential part of protecting public health. However, shouldn't the authorities give equal priority to examining problems within government hospitals, such as non-functional equipment, shortages of medicines, and the availability of staff? Are senior health department officials responsible for the Bhadrachalam region, particularly the concerned District Medical and Health Officer, inspecting the hospital's functioning on the ground? Are corrective measures being taken when deficiencies are identified? What monitoring mechanisms are in place to ensure that people receive quality healthcare? It would be unfair to treat every person working in the government healthcare system in the same manner. The government also has a responsibility to provide adequate facilities to doctors and staff members who perform their duties with dedication. At the same time, any negligence in the discharge of official duties must be investigated, and appropriate action must be taken wherever warranted.““? Private Hospitals Are Increasing - What Happens to the Poor?““Private hospitals are expanding in Bhadrachalam, and people have to spend a substantial portion of their income to obtain treatment there. When essential services are unavailable at the government hospital, ordinary citizens may eventually be forced to borrow money just to seek treatment at a private facility. Patients who travel to the Bhadrachalam Government Hospital with great hope from remote forest areas and tribal villages must be able to receive the treatment they need there. Only then will public confidence in the government healthcare system grow. Constructing a building alone does not constitute development. True development means providing quality healthcare to people inside that building. Appointing doctors is not enough; they must also be provided with the necessary equipment, medicines, supporting staff, and a suitable working environment.““? Questions to Officials on Behalf of the Public““* How much funding was allocated to the Bhadrachalam Government Hospital during the last three financial years, and how much was actually spent?““* How many qualified doctors are currently working in each medical department?““* What is the list of medical equipment that is non-functional or damaged? Have steps been taken to repair it or purchase replacements?““* When were the homeopathy, Ayurveda, and Unani departments last inspected regarding medicine stocks, the availability of doctors, and the services provided to patients?““* If essential medicines are unavailable, what measures are being taken to ensure their supply?““* Is there a dedicated mechanism through which the public can lodge complaints about the quality of medical services at the hospital?““* What action has been taken on the complaints received?““? Public Money Must Be Accounted For - People Must Receive Healthcare.““This should not be viewed merely as a problem concerning a single hospital. It concerns the trust that poor people place in the government healthcare system. Even after spending crores of rupees on constructing buildings and paying doctors' salaries, if patients cannot obtain the treatment they need, the system must be reviewed. Based on the conditions observed at the hospital, we are bringing these questions before the public. The concerned officials should conduct an on-site inspection, examine the actual conditions in every department, and rectify the shortcomings. They should also provide the public with a transparent report on the utilization of funds, staff details, the supply of medicines, and the maintenance of medical equipment. A government hospital is the last hope for the poor. Do not turn that hope into disappointment. People need healthcare, not just buildings. They need services, not just promises. Public money must be accounted for, and ordinary citizens must receive quality medical care.

Collector asks officials to brace for possible El Niño impact.

Karimnagar October 15, Khaja Sikandar Mohiuddin (Correspondent): District Collector Chitra Mishra has directed officials to prepare comprehensive action plans to address potential challenges arising from El Niño, with a focus on ensuring uninterrupted drinking water and electricity supply.

At a review meeting with district-level officials at the Integrated District Offices Complex (IDOC) on Thursday, Ms. Mishra stressed the need to identify vulnerable areas in advance and take preventive measures instead of responding after problems arise. Additional Collector (Revenue) D. Srinivas Reddy attended the meeting.

The Collector directed the Irrigation, Electricity, Agriculture and Groundwater departments to coordinate their efforts and assess their preparedness. Irrigation officials were asked to monitor reservoir water levels regularly and plan water allocation based on existing stocks and anticipated demand.

She emphasised the need to identify areas likely to face drinking water shortages and make arrangements to ensure an uninterrupted supply. Electricity officials were instructed to take precautionary measures to prevent disruptions, particularly those that could affect agricultural operations and water supply systems.

Ms. Mishra also called for continuous assessment of ground-level conditions and timely resolution of emerging problems. All departments were asked to formulate area-specific action plans and monitor their implementation to minimise inconvenience to the public.

She said another review meeting would be held next Thursday and directed department heads to attend with detailed action plans outlining the measures proposed to address potential challenges arising from El Niño.
