Questions about law and order in the Police Commissionerate..!!

""Khammam Staffer, October 02, Indian Chronicle.""Several questions are being raised among the public regarding the protection of law and order within the Khammam Police Commissionerate limits, night-time police patrolling, control of narcotics, and surveillance over illegal activities. Locals are demanding stronger police monitoring of alleged nighttime activities such as the sale and use of ganja, illegal transportation of sand and soil, in the city as well as surrounding municipalities and suburban areas. There is also discussion over whether factors such as staff shortages in the police department, the vast jurisdiction, and the impact of increasing urbanization are affecting the maintenance of law and order. However, there is a need for the concerned officials to clarify the allegations being made by victims and the public regarding the police response in some incidents.""? Victim's allegations regarding the Mamata Hospital Road incident.""An incident reportedly occurring within the Mamata Hospital Road area has currently become a topic of discussion. According to the victim's account, while he was parking his car near a tea café to have tea with two friends, four unidentified persons allegedly attacked him and his friends, forcibly took the car keys, and drove away the vehicle (Mahindra Thar). The victim reportedly stated that he and his friends sustained injuries in the incident and were left frightened. The victim alleges that when they subsequently approached the police, the response was along the lines of saying that they had nothing to do with it. However, the concerned police officials' complete official explanation regarding these allegations is yet to be made known to the public. The victim's side says they have received information that the persons accused of taking the vehicle had cases against them in the past. If individual persons have cases registered against them in the jurisdictions of several police stations, how is police surveillance over the movements of such persons being maintained? If allegations arise that despite having cases against them they are again engaging in such incidents, what action have the officials taken regarding them? These questions are arising.""? Allegations of political pressure, where is the evidence?""There are local allegations that some unruly activities have political connections behind them. There are also claims that some individuals are intimidating people by claiming to be followers of political leaders. However, evidence officially confirmed by the concerned political leaders or the police department regarding these allegations needs to come out. People are demanding that the police department give a clear message that if anyone takes the law into their own hands under the pretext of having 'political backing', legal action will be taken against them.""? Questions also regarding the Tekulapalli incident.""News that had previously emerged regarding an incident in which a girl was harassed in one of the double-bedroom houses in the Tekulapalli area of Khammam city is also now coming up for public discussion. The police department needs to clearly disclose to the public the facts related to that incident, the progress of the investigation, and details of the action taken against those responsible." "? The public has only one demand.""The law should be equal for everyone. People are demanding that the police respond quickly to complaints regarding ganja sales, illegal transportation, fraud in land disputes, nighttime illegal activities, assaults, and similar matters. Locals say that if there are allegations such as registering the same property in the names of multiple people, the revenue, registration, and police departments should conduct an investigation in coordination. Against the backdrop of recent developments within the Khammam Police Commissionerate limits, law-and-order monitoring is being further strengthened. With this focus, there is interest among the public as to whether some police officials may have been transferred. Whenever allegations are made against the police, to what extent is it right to assume that they are true? At the same time, to what extent is it justified to ignore the complaints of victims? These questions have now become a topic of discussion among the people of Khammam. It is the responsibility of the police department to instill confidence among the public that no matter how much political, social, or economic influence a person who violates the law may have, everyone is equal before the law. It remains to be seen whether senior officials will comprehensively examine the latest allegations within the Khammam Police Commissionerate limits and disclose the facts to the public or not.

The roots of words in the ancient Gondi Koya language should be identified.

""Bhadradri Kothagudem, October 02, Indian Chronicle.""Bhadrachalam MLA Tellam Venkat Rao said that although the regions are different, the culture, traditions, customs and practices, and the way of speaking of Adivasi tribal people are the same, and although the languages differ according to the region, their meaning remains the same. On Friday, he participated along with ITDA PO B Rahul in the Gondi- Koya Dictionary Workshop programme held at the Tribal Bhavan. After performing puja and unveiling the Gondi- Koya clan flag installed in the premises of the Tribal Bhavan, he paid homage to the portraits of great Adivasi leaders. On the occasion of Gandhi Jayanti, after garlanding the portrait of Gandhiji and paying homage along with the Adivasi representatives and tribals who participated in the workshop, he said that the standards, culture and traditions of the Gondi Koya language in India are very ancient, and that a workshop was conducted in Hyderabad on July 7, 2014 to seek official recognition for this language, and a report was submitted to the Centre in 2017. He said that if the language is to gain recognition at the global level, the ancient roots, words and letters of the language must be identified according to the regions, and if all the tribal communities in the 12 states move forward together, our language will certainly receive special recognition."Later, ITDA Project Officer B Rahul said that he heartily congratulated everyone who had come to participate along with Bhadrachalam ITDA for the great benefit of the Koya community in this historic context, and said that just as it is true that Adivasis are the indigenous people of this country, it is equally a bitter truth that the languages and cultures of indigenous communities are at risk of extinction due to the lack of proper recognition and respect. In these circumstances, the Koya Gond community, the largest indigenous community in Central India, is spread across about nine states, and all the representatives of its descendants have come together to standardize the language, that is, to achieve uniformity, with the aim of preserving and developing their language and securing linguistic recognition, and this great effort must certainly be appreciated, he said. We must all definitely recognize that the recognition of the languages and cultures of indigenous communities is a historical necessity. Let us also become participants. For that, there is only one thing we need to do, every one of us who seeks recognition for the language should speak in our mother tongue, Koya, let us teach our children our language, and let us protect our culture. On this occasion, I can confidently and proudly say that Bhadrachalam ITDA has always stood with you with full support on every occasion when efforts are being made to preserve the languages and cultures of indigenous communities. Providing primary education through Koya Bharati and Koya primers on many occasions, officially conducting Adivasi Day celebrations on a grand scale, renovating the museum, conducting the first Koya Language Day here itself, unveiling and celebrating the 2019 International Year of Indigenous Languages logo at ITDA along with the United Nations, producing an album blending Koya Rela songs with music, conducting this same Koya language workshop in 2015, recently documenting the mythological stories of Koya household deities, and now hosting the second 12th Koya language workshop are evidence that our ITDA is standing by us. He said that being with you on this occasion is a great experience."Not only as an officer but also as a fellow human being, I sincerely wish that the Koya language, culture and history receive proper recognition and respect, and he said that our ITDA will always extend its full support. Later, he watched the dance performance presented by Adivasi children."Assistant Project Officer General David Raj, Sarpanch Poonem Krishna Dora, ATDO Radhamma, retired ACMO Ramanaiah, Gondi-Koya Workshop Convener Nehru, and representatives who came from nine states, among others, participated in this programme.

""(Yadadri Bhuvanagiri District Bureau – Indian Chronicle – October 2): A special Gram Sabha was held on Friday, October 2, at the Tajapur Gram Panchayat in Bhuvanagiri Mandal to mark Mahatma Gandhi Jayanti. Initially, floral tributes were paid to the statue of Mahatma Gandhi. Subsequently, officials inspected the existing soak pits, vertical soak pits, and rainwater harvesting pits installed at the local school. Speaking on the occasion, VB-GRAM-G Director P. Shiva Shankar advised that, as part of the VB-GRAM-G program, a comprehensive plan should be formulated by identifying necessary works in advance to ensure continuous employment for village laborers up to June 2027. District Collector Anurag Jayanthi advised farmers to adopt crop rotation methods rather than relying solely on rain-fed crops, keeping weather conditions in mind.
