Fluke Unveils Its Most Powerful Acoustic Imagers in a Smaller, Lighter Design, Enabling Faster Inspections and More Confident Maintenance Decisions

“““““Hyderabad:“““““As India's industrial and manufacturing sectors continue to expand, maintaining operational efficiency, asset reliability and energy performance is becoming increasingly important for organisations. Hidden compressed air leaks can lead to significant energy losses, while developing electrical and mechanical issues can escalate into equipment failures, safety risks and unplanned downtime.“With industries placing greater emphasis on predictive maintenance, operational resilience and energy efficiency, the ability to identify potential equipment issues early is critical. Organisations need technologies that can simplify inspections, uncover hidden problems faster and enable maintenance teams to make more informed decisions.“Organisations need technologies that can uncover hidden issues faster, simplify inspections and enable more confident maintenance decisions. To meet that need, Fluke today introduced the Fluke ii1050 and ii1030 Acoustic Imagers, a new generation of imaging designed to deliver greater acoustic performance in a significantly smaller, lighter platform while simplifying the path from detection to action.““Approximately 40% smaller than previous-generation models and weighing just 1.2 kilograms, the ii1050 and ii1030 make long inspections more comfortable and confined or hard-to-reach areas easier to access. Despite the significantly smaller form factor, the imagers retain the same-sized display, now with an anti-glare screen for improved visibility, while an IP54-rated design provides greater protection for demanding industrial environments. ““Equipped with 202 microphones, up from 64 in previous-generation models, the cameras can detect fainter sounds and pinpoint their source with greater precision. A high-resolution 13-megapixel camera provides clear visual context, while on-device reporting and an integrated flashlight help teams inspect, diagnose, and document issues in the field. Support for the new TC03A plug-in thermal camera adds thermal imaging to the inspection workflow, giving technicians additional visual context when investigating equipment conditions.““"Maintenance is increasingly less about responding to failures reactively and more about preventing them," said Tako Feron, Senior Product Manager, Acoustic Imaging, at Fluke. "More complex work means experienced technicians are increasingly scarce, so teams need technologies that turn complex data into clear insights in the field. The Fluke ii1050 and ii1030 reveal issues that might otherwise go undetected and present information in a way that is intuitive and relevant to the user, enabling faster, more confident decisions on the job. This also supports sustainability by reducing energy waste, improving asset reliability and reducing costly disruptions."

Illegal Construction in the Serilingampally Zone

““Serilingampalli Zonal: Illegal construction activities are surging within the jurisdiction of the GHMC (Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation) in the Serilingampally zone.““Town planning officials are allegedly colluding with builders, profiting handsomely from these illicit operations.““Buildings are being constructed without any mandatory setbacks, and in some cases, they are even encroaching upon public roads. Residents in areas such as Sriram Nagar, Prabhupada, Raghavendra Colony, JV Colony, and the DLF vicinity are expressing outrage, accusing GHMC town planning officials of complete apathy and inaction.““Builders are reportedly receiving notices, after which small holes are punched into the concrete slabs—a mere formality—followed by a "settlement" within a week, allowing construction to continue as if nothing happened.““Local residents are questioning the very purpose of issuing these notices if the construction is simply allowed to proceed unchecked.““Are these matters not reaching the GHMC Commissioner?““GHMC town planning officials and lower-level staff appear to be facilitating these illegal constructions, potentially keeping their superiors in the dark—or perhaps with the tacit knowledge of those higher up. The public is now urging the Municipal Commissioner to conduct a field-level inspection and take decisive action against these unauthorized structures. 'Chainmen' Profiting from Illegal Constructions!!““Wherever illegal construction takes place, these 'chainmen' (field-level municipal staff) arrive on the scene, strike a deal, and then go through the motions of issuing a formal notice—only to subsequently assist the builders in ensuring the construction is completed in its entirety. Residents of the affected colonies are urging the Zonal Commissioner and the Municipal Commissioner to take note of these practices and ensure justice for the public.““In several colonies, these illegal structures are being used to operate hostels; however, the lack of basic amenities—such as a proper water supply—is forcing tenants to vacate the premises. Local residents have expressed deep concern, questioning why the relevant GHMC (Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation) officials remain completely indifferent and inactive despite these ongoing violations.

The ball doesn't swing as much as it used to: Trent Boult on the changing art of fast bowling

Emirates Eagles pace ace believes bowlers

“““““Hyderabad: “““““New Zealand fast-bowling great Trent Boult believes the diminishing influence of swing bowling has fundamentally changed the challenges facing fast bowlers in modern white-ball cricket, forcing them to constantly reinvent themselves to stay ahead of increasingly aggressive batters.““Representing Emirates Eagles in the 2026 Abu Dhabi T10 at the Zayed Cricket Stadium, Boult reflected on the evolution of fast bowling, his own transformation from a new-ball specialist into an effective death-overs bowler, and why even a couple of dot balls can make the difference in cricket's shortest format.“““"The ball probably doesn't swing as much as it used to," Boult said after helping Emirates Eagles secure a victory. "You see some big scores around the world. Ten years ago, did we think that would happen? No, but I'm not sure where that's going to take the game."““The 37-year-old, renowned for his ability to swing the new ball and trouble some of the world's finest batters, acknowledged that the opportunities for conventional swing bowling have become increasingly limited.“““Given the position of white-ball cricketers these days, the ball only swings for what feels like a minimal time. So, as you play so much cricket, I think you have to try and find new ways to be effective, try to improve, try to keep making yourself a better player, and just move with the times," he explained.“““It doesn't always go to plan, but I like to be creative at the death with certain deliveries and try to stay ahead of the batter."““Boult's observations come at a time when enormous totals and extraordinary individual batting performances have become increasingly common in limited-overs cricket. While batters continue to push the boundaries of what is possible, the experienced left-arm pacer believes bowlers must find new ways to remain competitive.“Yet, despite the changing nature of the game, Boult remains deeply attached to the skill that first established him as one of the most feared fast bowlers in international cricket.
