Private School Playing with a Student's Future..!

““Sattupally, November 14, Indian Chronicle.““Every father dreams of providing his daughter with higher education and helping her achieve a respectable position in life. He works tirelessly, making countless sacrifices to turn those dreams into reality. But when a school management's negligence puts a young girl's future in jeopardy, where can a helpless father turn to express his anguish? Pilli Sudhakar, a resident of Marlapadu village in Vemsur mandal, admitted his daughter, Sirivennela, to New Song School two years ago, where she studied Classes 1 and 2. Later, she appeared for the entrance examination for admission to a residential school and secured a seat at Palvancha. Accordingly, Sudhakar made arrangements to admit his daughter to the residential school. However, the actual problem began at this stage. Sudhakar alleges that New Song School, where his daughter had previously studied, incorrectly recorded her date of birth in its school records and entered her surname as 'Pooreti' instead of 'Pilli'. He expressed his anguish, stating that despite visiting the school repeatedly for the past 40 days, requesting corrections to these errors and the issuance of the necessary documents, there has been no response. Sudhakar further alleged that the school management was insisting that his daughter continue studying at the same school if the errors in the records were to be corrected; otherwise, her surname would remain unchanged. He also complained that the management informed him that the principal had gone abroad and that he would have to wait until the principal returned. In addition, the school allegedly imposed conditions requiring him to pay the prescribed fees and continue his daughter's education at the same institution.““? Why Should a Young Girl's Education Be Obstructed?““Who is responsible for correcting errors in school records? Why is there such a prolonged delay in issuing essential certificates required for a student's future? How justified is it for a school to insist that a student continue studying at the same institution as a condition for correcting mistakes in its records?These questions are now being raised by parents. Villagers have expressed concern that it is unfortunate that a father has been forced to visit the school repeatedly for 40 days just to secure his daughter's future.““? Officials Must Intervene and Ensure Justice for the Affected Family.““Parents and villagers have appealed to senior education department officials to intervene immediately, examine the student's school records, correct the errors in accordance with the rules, and ensure that the necessary certificates are issued without further delay. They have also demanded a comprehensive inquiry into the functioning of private schools and appropriate action if any violations of regulations are established. They further urged the authorities to consider cancellation of the school's recognition, if necessary.“Education is a child's fundamental right. Errors in school records should not become a curse that jeopardizes her future. The concerned authorities have a responsibility to respond to the anguish and tears of a father who is fighting for his daughter's future.

Consent Is a Choice, Not an Assumption: Charu Sinha

""Hyderabad, November 14: Consent must never be assumed or treated as blanket approval, and an individual's agreement to one interaction cannot be taken as permission for everything that follows, Charu Sinha, IPS, Director General (ACB, CID and WSW), said on Saturday, stressing the need to respect personal boundaries and individual choices. "Consent is usually specific. A yes to one thing does not mean yes to everything else," she observed while speaking at the ninth edition of the #StandWithHer panel discussion series on "Everyday Consent, Desire and Mutual Decision-Making" at Dr. B.R. Ambedkar Open University in Hyderabad."Emphasising that consent is relevant to everyday interactions and not merely intimate relationships, Sinha said silence, familiarity or previous agreement should never be interpreted as consent. She stressed that individuals must be able to communicate their choices freely, without fear, pressure or guilt, and that their decisions must be respected at every stage. The discussion examined how social conditioning, gender stereotypes, fear of judgement and unequal power relations can influence a person's ability to express disagreement. Panellists also highlighted how societal expectations often make it difficult for women to refuse, even when they are uncomfortable."Writer and film director Hasith Goli called for greater openness in expressing personal choices, while writer-director Ram Jagadeesh underlined the legal and social boundaries governing consent, referring to child protection provisions under the POCSO Act. Journalist Abhinay Deshpande challenged conventional notions of masculinity, arguing that respecting another person's choices is a more meaningful expression of strength. Doctoral researchers Gadha and Debomita from the University of Hyderabad discussed the impact of social conditioning on women's ability to say no. Senior journalist Uma Sudhir, who moderated the discussion, stressed that consent is neither permanent nor unconditional and can be withdrawn at any time."The programme was organised as part of the year-long #StandWithHer campaign, which seeks to promote dialogue on gender equality and encourage constructive conversations between men and women. The discussion called for a culture built on clear communication, mutual respect and recognition of individual autonomy.
